

Rationale for Voting YES on the Delegate-Approved Constitution

We, the members of Krypto Labs , having previously expressed our support for the core principles and framework of this constitution by voting in favor of it at the constitutional convention, are now presented with the opportunity to solidify that decision. The document before us is the same document we affirmed at the convention, refined and finalized by our elected delegate. Therefore, a YES vote on this delegate-approved constitution is a vote to:

- Uphold our initial decision: A YES vote reaffirms our collective will as expressed at the constitutional convention. It demonstrates consistency and commitment to the process we began.
- Respect the work of all delegates: We entrusted our elected delegates to review, refine, and finalize the constitution based on the feedback and direction provided at the convention. A YES vote acknowledges and respects the time and effort they dedicated to this important task.
- Establish a stable foundation: By ratifying this constitution, we provide our community with a clear and established framework for governance. This stability is essential for future growth and development.
- Move forward as a unified community: A YES vote allows us to move forward together, operating under a shared set of principles and rules. It allows us to focus on the future and the work of building a stronger community.

Since this vote concerns the same document we approved at the convention, a YES vote is the logical and consistent next step in this process. It honors our initial decision, respects the work of our delegates, and sets the stage for a more structured and unified future for our community.
